Who we are

The Local Government Ombudsman looks at complaints about councils and some other authorities, including education admissions appeal panels. It is a free service. Our job is to investigate complaints in a fair and independent way – we do not take sides.

If you have a problem with a council service, you should first complain to the council. But if you are still not satisfied, we may be able to help. Call the LGO Advice Team on 0300 061 0614 or go to our website at www.lgo.org.uk

One of our advisers will listen to you and say whether we can consider your complaint. If we can the adviser will take the details, explain our role and tell you what will happen next.

Note – where this leaflet refers to 'councils' and 'councillors', it applies to all the authorities that the Local Government Ombudsman can investigate (for a full list, phone the LGO Advice Team or see our website at www.lgo.org.uk).

What we can do

We can look at complaints about most council services, including those covering:

- > housing
- > planning
- > education
- > transport and highways
- > environmental health
- > neighbour nuisance and anti-social behaviour
- > social care
- > housing benefit
- > council tax

We can consider complaints about things that have gone wrong in the way a service has been given or the way a decision has been made, if this has caused problems for you. For example, you may want to complain about:

- > administrative fault, such as the council making a mistake or not following its own rules
- > poor service or no service
- > delay, or
- > bad advice.

If we find that the council has done something wrong, we try to get it to put the matter right. We do this in more than a quarter of the cases we investigate. The action we ask the council to take will depend on the particular complaint; how serious the fault was; and how you have been affected by what the council has done wrong.

What we can't do

We cannot usually question what a council has done simply because you do not agree with it. There must be some fault by the council. But even then we may not investigate your complaint if you're only slightly affected by what has gone wrong.

There are some things we may not investigate because there is a more appropriate body to deal with your complaint, or because we don't have the legal power to do so. If we can't help, we will tell you about other organisations that may be able to help.

When to complain

If you have a complaint, the first thing to do is complain to the council. You can find out how to complain from the council, or you can ask a councillor to help. In most cases, the council must have a chance to sort out the complaint before we can consider it. Councils often have more than one stage in their complaints procedure. You will usually have to complete all stages before we will look at your complaint.

If you are not satisfied with the council's final answer, or if it does not give you an answer within a reasonable time, you can complain to us. We think up to 12 weeks is a reasonable time for the council to investigate your complaint and reply to you.

But where the complaint is urgent, for example, because it is about a school place for next term or because you are particularly at risk, we may be able to deal with it straight away.

You should normally complain to us within 12 months of when you first knew about the problem you are complaining about. If you leave it any later, we may not be able to help.

Key facts about the Ombudsmen

- > There are three Local Government Ombudsmen in England.
- > We make our decisions independently of all government departments, councils and politicians.
- > We examine complaints without taking sides. We are not consumer champions.
- > We are appointed by Her Majesty the Queen.
- > We have the same powers as the High Court to obtain information and documents.
- > Our decisions are final and cannot be appealed. However, you can challenge them in the High Court if you think our reasoning has a legal flaw.
- > We do not have to investigate every complaint received, even if we have the power to do so. For example, we may decide not to investigate if we think the problem you mention would have affected you only slightly.
- > We are committed to providing a fair service and spending public money effectively.
- > We do not charge for using our service.
- > When we find that a council has done something wrong, we may recommend how it should put it right. Although we cannot make councils do what we recommend, they are almost always willing to act on what we say.
